[Constitution as of July, 1947]

474 products of the collective farms and cooperative organizations, as 421 well as their common buildings, constitute the common, socialist property of the collective farms and cooperative organizations.

Every household in a collective farm, in addition to its basic income from the common, collective-farm enterprise, has for its personal use a small plot of household land and, as its personal property, a subsidiary husbandry on the plot, a dwelling house, livestock, poultry and minor agricultural implements - in accordance with the Rules of the Agricultural Artel.

423 Art. 8. The land occupied by collective farms is secured
474 to them for their use free of charge and for an unlimited time, that is, in perpetuity.

472 Art. 9. Alongside the socialist system of economy, which is the predominant form of economy in the Georgian SSR, the law permits the small private economy of individual peasants and handicraftsmen based on their own labour and precluding the exploitation of the labour of others.

421 Art. 10. The personal property right of citizens in their incomes and savings from work, in their dwelling houses and subsidiary home enterprises, in articles of domestic economy and use and articles of personal use and convenience, as well as the right of citizens to inherit personal property, is protected by law.

185 Art. 11. The economic life of the Georgian SSR is determined
471 and directed by the state national-economic plan, with the aim of increasing the public wealth, of steadily raising the material and cultural standards of the working people, of consolidating the independence of the USSR and strengthening its power and defensive capacity.

461 Art. 12. Work in the Georgian SSR is a duty and a matter of honour for every able-bodied citizen, in accordance with the principle: "He who does not work, neither shall he eat."

The principle applied in the Georgian SSR is that of socialism: "From each according to his ability, to each according to his work."

Chapter II. The State Structure

642 Art. 13. For the purpose of mutual assistance among the Union Republics along economic and political lines, as well as along the line of defence, the Georgian SSR voluntarily united with the other equal Soviet Socialist Republics, namely:

The Russian Soviet Federative Socialist Republic,
The Ukrainian Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Byelorussian Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Uzbek Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Kazakh Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Azerbaijan Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Lithuanian Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Moldavian Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Latvian Soviet Socialist Republic,
The Kirghiz Soviet Socialist Republic,

S.U. 453 [245] Ge. [433] 245 439 800 industrial enterprises in the country, most of which had a local importance only. Great attention was paid to the cultivation of tea and citrus fruits. The tea plantations, almost non-existent before the First World War, covered 128,440 acres in 1947. Tea production increased from 264,556 pounds in 1913 to 118,814,635 pounds in 1940, and the entire Soviet Union is now drinking 'Georgian tea'. Georgia has become completely dependent on the Russian market for this new produce of her soil; an independent Georgian State would hardly be able to find alternative buyers for the quantity of tea which is being grown on Georgian territory on the basis of all-Union economic planning.

S.U. 245 185 Ge. 245 The same would most probably apply to Georgia's citrus fruits, for which Georgia has also a monopoly in the U.S.S.R. The Georgian citrus fruit plantations grew from 295 acres in 1913 to 24,700 acres in 1938, but an ambitious plan fixing the area of these plantations at 98,000 acres in 1944 has remained largely on paper. Such a sensational increase had been decreed by the Council of Peoples Commissars of the U.S.S.R. on April 25th, 1940, but even without the interruption of the war the fulfilment of these targets might have proved unattainable. After the war, the question of the Georgian citrus fruit plantations was reconsidered by the central Government. A new decree was enacted on February 15th, 1946, which fixed the revised target for 1950 at 72,600 acres only.

It was the Georgian Government which was entrusted with the unpopular task of prohibiting the Georgian collective farmers from planting the areas reserved for the new citrus plantations with anything but lemons, oranges and tangerines. The overall responsibility for the implementation of the decree on the development of Georgian citrus plantations was, however, divided between the all-Union Ministry for Technical Cultures and the Georgian Government.

Ge. 243 433 439 The extension of tea and citrus fruit plantations in Georgia prevented any increase in the local wheat and maize production which would have corresponded to the 32 per cent augmentation of Georgia's population between 1926 and 1939. Even before the First World War Georgia was forced to import cereals in years of an average harvest. The agricultural policy which the Soviet régime had pursued in Georgia made things much worse. In 1950 Georgia had to import 75 per cent of its bread supply from other Soviet Republics. This state of affairs was bound to cause considerable dissatisfaction in the country and the Communist Party found itself compelled to change its agrarian policy. It introduced a special seven-year plan for Georgian agriculture with the aim of making the republic self-sufficient in cereals by 1957.

Ge. [185] Ge 464 The economic assignments given to Georgia were not of such magnitude as to require any substantial manpower imports. On the contrary, the Georgians belong to those few peoples in the Soviet Union who should be able to cope with the tasks allotted to them by economic
